CAR PARKING CRAZY!

IT'S BEEN AN autumn of car parking comedy and chaos in Alvechurch, where work to improve two of the main car parks has reduced the number of spaces available – just as villagers face the possibility of losing access to the largest long-stay parking in the village centre.

Meanwhile, in Lickey, the start of the new school year has brought rising concern over dangerous and selfish parking during drop-off and pick-up times.

But in Barnt Green there will be at least one more parking space after the owner of a vehicle left on the Fiery Hill Road commuter car park – for as long as five years, the parish council believes – was traced by police and asked to move it.

The resurfacing work on Tanyard Lane car park, Alvechurch, by contractors for Bromsgrove District Council raised a laugh when, predictably, social media alerts failed to reach one motorist who had parked her car there.

A photo of the Nissan Micra sitting in a neat cut-out of the new tarmac soon went viral around the village.

But the real problems for villagers emerged when new parking spaces were painted on to the fresh surface: there are now around eight fewer spaces than before.

The new layout leaves a large empty space which, as parish councillor Keith Wiseman pointed out at the October parish council meeting, was large enough to install a maypole.

District councillors have asked for an investigation by officers into the "fiasco" and for a better layout to be installed.

The long-running problems over the "great lake of Alvechurch" at the station car park, meanwhile, was tackled by contractors for West Midlands Trains. Unfortunately, it seems the new material brought in to fill the hollow has either just made it shallower, but much wider, or prevented the water from draining into a soakaway.

Clockwise from above: When Facebook doesn't work; 'Long-term' parking on Barnt Green's commuter park; The Lickey parking panel looks for solutions; The 'great lake' gets bigger at Alvechurch station.

Whatever has happened, the lake there is now bigger than ever after heavy rain, forcing commuters to get wet feet or park out on nearby streets.

Again, the problem has been reported by district councillors who have asked for more work to be done to rectify the problem.

These problems will pale beside the potential loss of more than 40 long-term spaces in the centre of the village this month.

A long-standing arrangement between Bromsgrove District Council and the former Sports & Social Club, now called the Alvechurch Inn, allowing residents to use the car park comes to an end in November. It has previously been suggested this will be replaced by 30-minute monitored parking.

The newly formed Alvechurch Business Partnership is meeting district council leadership later this month to emphasise how large this problem could become for village businesses. One suggestion to create more parking saces is to remove double-yellow parking restrictions along the 20mph zone through the village centre, but this would need county highways support.

Lickey's parking problems were higlighted at an open meeting called by county councillor Adrian Kriss and held at the Trinity Centre, where more than 30 residents aired their concerns.

The safety of Lickey Hills Primary School pupils topped the list, with some said to be forced to walk in the road by cars double-parked across the pavement.

The panel, including police, school leaders and district councillor Anita Dale, heard from residents who had received abuse from drivers parked across their driveways. Some motorists had even driven across front gardens. The panel will report back early in the new year.

Speeders caught one a minute

A DRIVER a minute was caught speeding when new technology was trialled in the heart of a village.

Alvechurch parish councillor Brett Shepherd, who is spearheading the council's efforts to tackle speeding, provided an update on a new speed enforcement campaign in Alvechurch village centre.

TruCAM, a handheld tool used to identify and capture road traffic offences, recorded 15 vehicles breaking the 20mph limit in just 15 minutes during a recent Thursday trial. Days later, 24 more drivers were identified speeding in a 30-minute period on a Saturday.

Parish council chairman Marc Worrall noted that the offenders were likely to have been "not outsiders, but local people".

The TruCAM device captures video evidence of speeding drivers, without the need for a parked police van, making it ideal for use in tight spaces or areas deemed unsafe for community speed watch campaigns.

Following the success of the Alvechurch trial, councillors have agreed to include a TruCAM in Bordesley in their quarterly policing priorities.

Bordesley is currently campaigning to reduce its speed limit from 40mph to 30mph, and the introduction of this new technology could play a key role in supporting those efforts.

Mystery painter

BARNT GREEN PARISH council is investigating how the wooden posts holding the roped fence at the "pollinator site" on Hewell Road came to be painted grey. The council had wanted to keep them "natural" so they would be low maintenance.

Staying wild?

ALVECHURCH'S REWILDING initiative, which allows certain grass verges in the village to remain unmown, has received mixed opinions from councillors. With no official report on its benefits yet from Bromsgrove District Council, some said while the rewilding areas may be healthy, there were aesthetic concerns, including over the area outside the council offices on George Road.

Coun Steve Hornsby defended the project: "It's clear from the Wildlife Trust that verges are a major contributor to improving biodiversity and reducing carbon footprint. The trial worked well, but it's too early to see the environmental impact. But if you keep cutting, wildlife definitely won't move in."

Clash avoided

NEXT YEAR'S Social Eats event in Barnt Green will now be held on August 30 after parish councillors agreed they did not want it to clash with Blackwell Music Festival, planned for September 6.

CROWN MEADOW First School and Nursery was buzzing with excitement as Olympic sprinter and bobsledder Joel Fearon (pictured above with pupils) visited for a day packed with sporting activities.

As part of the Great Athletes initiative, Joel spent the day inspiring children with his story of determination and hard work, while leading them through fun and engaging athletic events.

His key message to all children was "be brave" and every child was determined to take this advice throughout the morning, and beyond. The event was a huge success, raising more than £2,500 to support the school's PE program.

Headteacher Mrs Hague expressed her gratitude, saying: "I think it is essential we motivate our young community to be physically and mentally fit. This event inspired all children to be brave and tackle challenges with perseverance and resilience, which truly exemplifies our school values."

Reverend Joey

A CELEBRATION party (above) was held to mark the ordination of Joey Redhead – now Reverend Redhead – as he became a new Minister at Alvechurch Baptist Church after three years of training.

Streets of scarecrows

BLACKWELL First School's PTA organised a successful Scarecrow Trail in October, offering the community a chance to explore Blackwell and discover creatively designed scarecrows while supporting a good cause, writes Keith Woolford.

Blessed with decent weather for a day of wandering, visitors collected maps, and enjoyed hot dogs and treats from the school playground before setting off on the trail.

This year's theme was "movies". The "Beetlejuice" skeleton bagged the top spot in the popular vote, followed by "Cruella" in second place and "Barbie" in third.

The Scarecrow Trail drew a great turnout, with families and residents coming together for a day of fun and creativity, raising £950, which will be used to provide additional resources and subsidise school trips for pupils, further enhancing their learning.

101 visitors: Cruella Deville and her dalmations were popular.

Below: Barbie and friends.

"Jack, I'm flying": Dramatic scenes on the Titanic in Blackwell.

Beetlejuice: The iconic creepster won the popular award.

AS The Village went to press in October, Alvechurch was preparing to host its own week of autumnal fun. The popular Scarecrow Trail was returning for everyone to enjoy over half term.

The streets were already buzzing with excited families, keen to explore the creations on the opening morning.

We'll be reporting on the event next month, including how much was raised for The Lounge, so look out for our December/January issue for more pictures like the one on the right . . .

IT'S PANTO SEASON

REHEARSALS are in full swing for one village drama group this November, who are preparing for their next production to delight villagers.

It's panto time for Alvechurch Dramatic Society (oh yes it is!), as writers Chris Davies and Paul Chamberlain return to the world of the Arabian Nights for Sinbad the Sailor and the Curse of Zard.

This show is a sequel to the group's 2010 smash hit Sherry Zard and the Sultan's Curse.

This time around, Sherry Zard and her husband the Sultan have fallen on hard times, and their nasty brother Jaffa is poised to take over the Kingdom.

Enter adventurous stranger Sinbad with tales of jewels and riches. This catches the attention of the greedy Jaffa, who sends him on a series of increasingly difficult quests, with control of the Kingdom as the prize!

Will Sinbad save the day, or will the feisty Princess Raisin come to the rescue? Will there really be a flying carpet in Alvechurch Village Hall? Will the famous panto camel make an appearance?

Curtains up: The cast prepare for the upcoming production.

Alvechurch Dramatic Society invite you to come and join them to find out the answers to these questions, and more! Children attending the matinee are encouraged to come dressed as their favourite fictional character.

The production runs from Thursday 28th November until Saturday 30th November at 7:30pm (plus a 2.30pm Saturday matinee) at Alvechurch Village Hall.

Tickets £9; £8 concessions, which are available from The Lounge, Alvechurch; or by phoning/texting 07977 140088; or you can email: ads.alvechurch@gmail.com

FOUNDED in 1964, Lickey WI have been celebrating their 60th "birthday" celebrations. The group were featured on BBC Midlands Today, who were marking 60th anniversaries and birthdays around the West Midlands. BBC reporter Ben Sidwell brought the iconic red sofa to the Trinity centre in Lickey, where he shared tea and cake with members of the group.

Jenny Ryder, President of Lickey WI, said: "We were delighted to be visited by Ben. everyone was amazed at how long it took to film what turned out to be less than a minute on screen but all enjoyed the opportunity to take part. We had our annual birthday meeting in July, where we invited representatives from other WIs in the Bromsgrove & Hillside Group to join us to celebrate."

Prize pickers

Volunteers congregated in Alvechurch village square to tackle the challenge of litter picking.

Families and couples were tasked with picking up litter from roadsides and parks around the village, in areas which are harder for the parish council to clear.

Organisers said that many certificates of achievements were given to the young volunteers, and much of the litter came from hedgerows along the main roads and parks including The Meadows and the Muga on Crown Meadow.

Get in the festive spirit: The Lickey Christmas lights switch-on celebrations, in December 2023.

Christmas Events

Christmas is fast approaching and our plans for our events are under way.
In Lickey, we will have our annual Christmas tree lights switch-on and concert. We will be joined by the wonderful choir from Lickey First School, Blackwell Concert Band and Santa himself! This will take place at Trinity Church, Lickey at 4pm on Sunday 8th December.
In Blackwell we will switch on the Christmas tree lights with the help of Santa and give out prizes to our Christmas competition winners (see below for details). This will be at The Wheel, St Catherine's Church at 5pm on Friday 6th December. We welcome any residents who wish to attend.
We will not have photos in time for the December edition of The Village, so here (above, right) is one from last year to get you in the mood.

Christmas Competition

Every year we run a competition for the children of the Parish to produce artwork which is then reproduced for our Parish Council Christmas card. This year the theme is "Christmas jumpers"!

You can find a template and further instructions on our website.
Using crayons, paints, pencils, glitter, buttons, beads or digitally, create your own unique, fun and festive design! There will be small prizes for the different age category winners and the overall winning design will receive copies of the Christmas card they have designed.

Please submit your designs to Lickey School, Blackwell School or our Parish Council Office at the Trinity Centre, 411 Old Birmingham Rd, Lickey, Birmingham B45 8ES by the deadline of 19th November.

Councillor Vacancy

Your parish council needs YOU!
We have two vacancies for councillors. We would like to co-opt community-minded residents to help us.
If you are passionate about Lickey and Blackwell and want to be the difference – become a parish councillor.
To find out more about being a parish councillor for Lickey and Blackwell Parish Council please visit our website or contact our Executive Officer.

Play Area Refurbishment

We are delighted that the Play Area Refurbishment in Blackwell is now complete (pictured), partly funded by a grant from the Government via Bromsgrove District Council. Maisie's Gardens have installed a wildflower border, and children from Blackwell School have planted 172 bulbs around the play area to celebrate the completion of the project that the children collaborated with. We hope that the refurbishment will make the equipment more accessible and will provide years of enjoyment to the children of the parish.

Benches

Look out for our handyman installing a replacement memorial bench for David King at the pocket park in Blackwell. We also hope to replace a bench on Old Birmingham Road in Lickey, and we are having the other benches painted.

Change of email and website addresses

Parish and town councils are changing addresses to ".gov.uk" addresses. We have changed ours to: www.lickeyandblackwell-pc.gov.uk and you can contact our Executive Officer via email: eo@lickeyandblackwell-pc.gov.uk.

Alvechurch Parish Council seek to actively reduce the parish's carbon footprint

Currently Alvechurch's footprint has been calculated as being 15.5t per household consumption. If you would like to find out your own personal carbon footprint please go to https://footprint.wwf.org.uk/

Through collective small actions we can all achieve significant change, paving the way for a sustainable future that begins right on our doorsteps.

Here are a few examples of ways in which you can reduce your carbon footprint:

- Switch to greener energy provider/reduce your heating thermostat by 1%
- Lower your laundry's impact (turn down the washing machine temperature/hang the washing outside on the line to dry)
- Try to eat less red meat and dairy products; eat 'seasonally' whenever possible
- Utilise modes of public transport; share a lift; walk or ride a bike
- Recycle household waste (plastics, carboard, tin etc)/upcycle)

Unsung Hero award presented to Mrs Eileen McHugh

Mrs Eileen McHugh has acted for a number of years as the Council's allotment liaison person and to whom the Council were most indebted.

THROW LIGHT ON PLAN

Dear Editor – I think your readers are entitled to more than 12 lines about the "Panels Plan", which was squeezed into the Village News Round-Up in the October edition; slightly less than the "Santa Secured" article for Barnt Green's Christmas Lights switch-on.

As you reported, the so-called Oak Valley Energy Park project would cover with solar panels most of the agricultural land either side of Ickneield Street, all the way from Weatheroak Hill to the M42.

Existing national policy calls for developers to prioritise brownfield land for green energy and housing projects, and only use Green Belt land if there are very special circumstance.

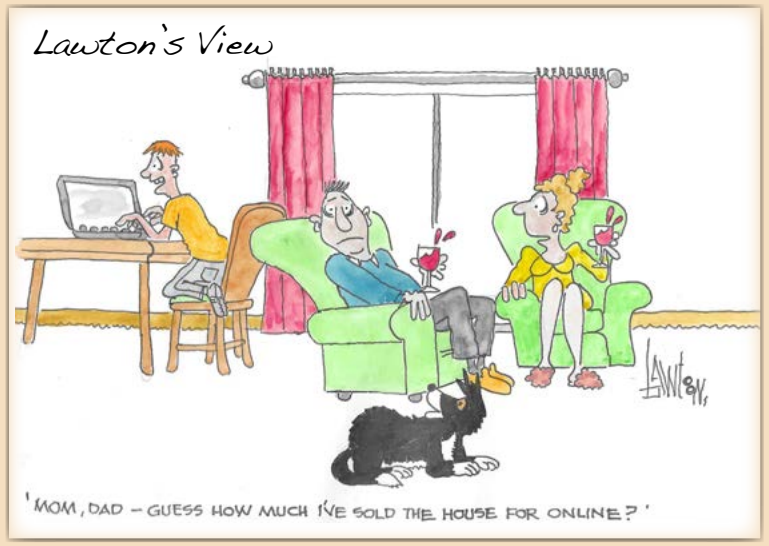
The guidance also states that flat land of limited agricultural value should be used, and that solar arrays and their attendant battery storage and converters should not be close to residential communities.

The Oak Valley Energy Park would not only be highly visible from Weatheroak Hill, designated by the National Trust in their proposed "8 Hills Regional Park" , but would also deprive walkers, cyclists, horseriders and fishermen of one of their most popular rural venues.

If it were to be given planning permission, it would also create a precedent for similar projects for speculators to come forward with schemes to convert neighbouring Green Belt land around Rowney Green and Alvechurch from agricultural to industrial use.

Hardly a matter to be tucked away in the bottom corner of a Village News Round-Up.

Bob Dale, Weatheroak



Bob Dale is the recipient of The Village "Star Letter" award of £25.

We'll be choosing a Star Letter every issue, so send in your views (email address below) for a chance to win £25.

We'd like to thank October's Star Letter winner who donated their prize money to The Lounge.

Housing for whose benefit?

Dear Editor – There appears to be another potential new housing development on the horizon, with the forthcoming disposal of the Cropwood trust estate, Blackwell (many people would refer to this estate as "Hunters Hill School", but it's a lot more than that).

The whole estate equates to 35 hectares (approx. 87 acres) which shows extensive lands to the left and right of Spirehouse Lane and the field where the more recent Blackwell Festivals have been held.

This land was given to the Birmingham City Council (BCC) by the Cadbury family for the benefit of Birmingham children and their education and has been run by a charity trust. A report outlining the disposal proposal was supposed to have been issued by BCC in June 2024 and then in September 2024, this is now going to be issued by BCC in November 2024 as reported at the Lickey and Blackwell Parish Council meeting in September 2024 by the head of operations at BCC.

While the new Labour government wants to see developments of 9,000 new houses by 2040 in and around Bromsgrove and surrounding districts, it would appear yet again the consultation and engagement process has failed.

Local people should be involved from the outset and have a proactive engagement rather than the standard reactive role in the future developments within our areas.

With the current budget value for building land in the Bromsgrove area being £2.85m per hectare, even a 50% usage of the land could generate a substantial sum of money.

Do the maths and let's see who would benefit.

The place to live?

Dear Editor – Plymouth Road not Barnt Green (as stated in the October issue of The Village)? That is simply incorrect!

First, I have no problem with the idea of living in Lickey – it's lovely!

I live off Twatling Road – even further from Barnt Green village centre than Plymouth Road. However, my postal address is Barnt Green and on Google maps my address and Plymouth Road are clearly well within the boundaries of Barnt Green.

Could Councillor Cholmondeley be thinking of parish council boundaries in suggesting that Plymouth Road is not in Barnt Green?

Joy Bourne, Barnt Green

Lamenting the Lickeys

Dear Editor – In my employment I am fortunate to frequent many areas that compete with the Lickey Hills for visitors, and the comparison between these areas and the Lickey Hills puts the Lickeys to shame.

People can refer to the current Birmingham City Council financial difficulties, a downsized work force, the lack of this and the lack of that, but the Lickey Hills, as a recreational facility, has been in decline for years.

The decline appeared to gather pace a few years ago with a large tree felling programme, apparently undertaken to bring the area back to how it should have been pre-war, but these areas have just been taken over by bramble, hence . . . what was the point?

The children's play area is a major disappointment for many children. Play equipment cordoned off, play equipment has been removed and never replaced, any equipment left needs a good lick of paint and the fencing is falling down. The benches in and the around the visitor centre have seen better days. Path steps have failed. Trees have been felled with no attempt to manage the works. Signs are damaged and never repaired. The ponds are silted and blocked with reeds, and the ducks appear to have accepted their fate. The Visitor Centre, now without a café, is now just a place for the council staff to presumably keep warm and discuss what needs to be done.

The golf course doesn't seem to struggle to get works done, so, what's the difference between the Lickey Hills and the golf course?

Credit must be given to those volunteers who, against the odds, try to look after the Lickey Hills, but their enthusiasm can only go so far.

An area that was once waiting for memories to be made, is now becoming a place of people wondering if they should have gone elsewhere.

Lickey Resident

Be careful what you wish for

Dear Editor – Your lead news story from the October edition referencing the "ghetto estate" is a direct result of the lack of planning foresight of so many, and particularly the objectional, nonsensical, default planning stance taken by the likes of Alvechurch Parish Council on virtually every occasion.

The residents of Hopwood are now resigned to a totally disproportionate number of "affordable" or "social housing" properties in the area once these 34 houses have been built.

Previous applications on this site for a private housing development have been fought and dismissed.

My personal view was always one of allowance being better than what we had in situ, a container site. How many will now wish they had pushed for the approval of one of the previous schemes? It appears the political winds will be driving the acceptance of many more, once refuted, parcels of land for "affordable housing".

Therefore, before we all object vigorously to any new proposed scheme, let this estate be a lesson in what you may just get in its place!

Disappointed, Hopwood

'Much needed homes approved'

Dear Editor – "Much needed affordable homes (eventually) approved."

That's the alternative headline to the "ghetto estate" article on page 5 of October's edition of The Village.

Bromsgrove has a chronic under supply of affordable homes and homes in general. In fact the Planning Inspector noted the housing delivery as "woeful".

The Hopwood site is brownfield land, contributing little or nothing to the Green Belt, and is ideally located for new housing. The unfortunate NIMBY position of Bromsgrove district councillors went against the recommendations of their experienced and appointed planning officers.

As a consequence, when the Inspector approved the homes the Inspector also awarded costs against Bromsgrove District Council for "wholly unreasonable behaviour" in wasting the applicant's time and money. A key matter the "ghetto" article helpfully omitted.

Those costs are ultimately met through local taxpayers' money. Something councillors should be mindful of, particularly when presented with future recommendations by their appointed planning officers for more housing in the right locations.

It is high time members of the planning committee worked with their officers and not against them.

Andy Carter, Cofton Hackett

How can we make this safe to walk?

Dear Editor – In response to the "Star Letter" in the October edition of The Village, I agree with the writer's comments on the engineer's response to walking along Sandhills Green beneath the railway bridge.

When I subsequently asked the engineer for further clarification of his comments that it was unsafe, he reiterated that: "this was in the context of any pedestrian walking in a highway with no footway access [is] unsafe. Anyone would agree I'm sure but the onus is on the pedestrian to take the risk and has to bear the responsibility should they choose to walk in the highway."

Places we live and work in change over time, and we must be aware and flexible to ensure that our infrastructure is moulded to respond to the needs of changing places and needs of communities that use them, wherever possible.

Over the years traffic from new developments around Barnt Green has increased. Also there is now a residential home, with carers walking to and from Barnt Green station, parents with pushchairs and young children, or the elderly with electric scooters, who may also need to utilise the highway under the bridge.

Where we can deliver new pavements we do, as can be evidenced between Linthurst Newtown and Barnt Green. But I have been told that in this case there can be no footway in this location due to the narrowness of the bridge.

I have suggested narrowing the carriageway with a priority for vehicles travelling in one direction, so that space can be made for pedestrians and increased lighting, but none of these have been deemed possible by technical advisors.

As I represent the residents who have expressed concern about no safe footway access under the bridge, I have escalated this matter to both the cabinet member responsible and the head of highways and transport for Worcestershire, and I have been told, as of September 17th, that it is being re-visited.

Once I have a further response I will report back to Barnt Green Parish Council, but in the meantime I am always open to any suggestions that have not already been considered or implemented. I am happy to discuss the matter more fully – please see my contact details below.

In addition, for the benefit of readers, where the Local Authority has a Traffic Regulatory Order (TRO) in place for a "Road Closure," then disregarding them can mean anything from a fixed penalty through to prosecution for careless driving.

Cast-offs to Catwalk

AN evening of fashion arrived in Barnt Green in October when Acorns Children's Hospice hosted a fashion show, in conjunction with Barnt Green Women's Institute.

Barnt Green Baptist Church accommodated a full audience, keen to see what Acorns had on offer. The catwalk was split into two halves, day wear and exquisite evening wear, with an interval where attendees were able to buy cakes and refreshments – and have the opportunity to snag a bargain. Some audience members were seen asking the models quite literally to buy the clothes off their backs.

£3,600 was raised at the event through ticket sales, raffle tickets, refreshments and sales of the fantastic clothes on offer.

A spokesperson for Acorns said: "The evening was a great success. We'd like to offer many thanks to our volunteers, the models, Barnt Green WI, our raffle prizes donors and Jess and Stuart from the Baptist church.

"We'd also like to say 'thank you' for the ongoing support of all our customers and donors providing vital income for Acorns Children's Hospices."

Work out like a star

VILLAGERS can now try out their celebrity idols' latest fitness craze with the opening of a new boutique studio, writes Bob Jefford.

The Bodi Barn at Tardebigge Court boasts six reformer Pilates machines, an apparatus that's shot to prominence with recent endorsements from the likes of David Beckham, Kim Kardashian and Justin Bieber.

Co-owner Natalie Bagnall said that TikTok and Instagram posts had created a new fitness fad: "It's become very popular over the last six to 12 months. There's loads of celebs and footballers using it".

Reformer Pilates machines are graduated spring-loaded resistance machines which enhance traditional mat-based Pilates exercises.

"It's a different type of workout and it's so varied, you could do a class every day of week and it'd always be different," Natalie said.

"It's a bit special because unlike mat Pilates, this is doing exercises with resistance, so it's enabling improvement in mobility, stability and core strength. It's also a low impact exercise, that's why it's good for all ages, and also for rehab."

Every class is led by a qualified instructor providing bespoke guidance.

Business partner Sarah Cartlidge decided to set up The Bodi Barn after she looked for a reformer Pilates class to join, but couldn't find anywhere local.

"People are really enjoying it," she said. "I think that's because there are small classes.

"Some people aren't very confident going to the gym, or they're a bit insecure, a bit scared, so coming to a small class makes them feel more confident."

You can find out more about the classes available at The Bodi Barn on pages 26–27.

Who knew what to expect?

EXPECTATIONS were certainly exceeded as The Midland Sinfonia's concert Expect the Unexpected began, writes Keith Woolford.

The classical orchestra, who perform in St Laurence Church, Alvechurch began with Pachelbel's popular Canon and its accompanying piece Gigue in D. A marvellous opener, which was followed by the six movement Suite for Strings – a light work by Janacek.

The Midland Sinfonia at their Expect the Unexpected concert.

The extraordinarily talented Samantha Atkinson was a particular highlight of the evening as she wowed the audience with her saxophone offering, playing Glazunov's Saxophone Concerto in E flat.

Written in 2011, Jazz for Strings Ensemble came next by the German composer Sigi Busch which had a trio of string violinist and the double bass player David Burndrett free styling.

A touch of Rossini completed an unexpected programme as his String Sonata No.5 in E flat concluded a spectacular start to the new season for 2024/25.

See the What's On section for the orchestra's upcoming Christmas concert.

RADIO FREQUENCY TREATMENTS

We are excited to announce our new Radio Frequency Treatments at Lunatips. This innovative treatment can help tighten skin to reduce the signs of ageing and also improve skin tone for a smoother, tighter and firmer skin. From double chins to a wobbly tummy, we can help you feel your best.

What is Radio Frequency?

Radio Frequency treatments use gentle waves of radio frequency which are passed into the skin, targeting the lower layer with a comfortable heat, which leads to tightening of elastic fibres and an increase of collagen production.

This treatment gives outstanding results in skin tightening, especially in those areas that can't be targeted by other means.

What does Radio Frequency do?

- Tightens skin
- Skin feels firmer and more toned
- Reduces the appearance of pores
- Provides a more radiant skin tone
- Smooths skin texture
- Reduces fine lines and wrinkles
- Improves appearance of scars
- Provides a 'lifted' appearance

What areas can Radio Frequency Treat?

- Eye area
- Chin
- Neck and décolletage
- Inner and outer thighs
- Tummy
- Buttocks
- Arms
- Hands

Recommended courses

We recommend a course of 6 treatments for areas of the face and a course of 8 treatments for areas of the body.

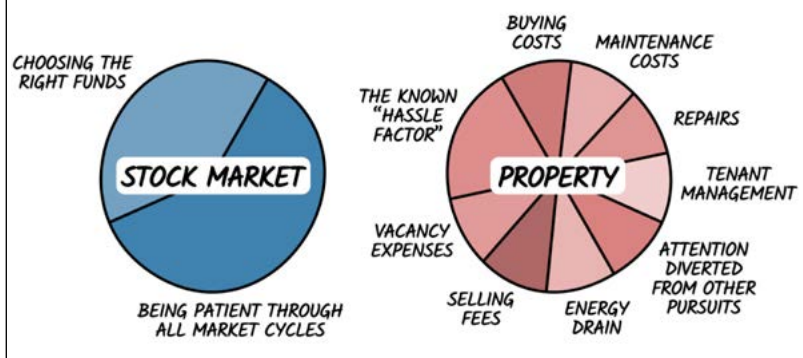
THE OVERLOOKED HASSLE OF BUYING PROPERTY

Martin Pryor explains how financial planning can save you from the hidden costs when buying property, and what's required to purchase property successfully.



WHEN building wealth for retirement, we often focus solely on the price tag of investments. However, many overlook a crucial insight that the true cost of owning assets extends far beyond the initial purchase price.

Sound financial planning involves accumulating assets that provide sustainable, growing retirement income.

While the monetary cost is obvious, it's just the tip of the iceberg. Hidden costs can significantly impact our well-being and financial success, yet they're frequently overlooked in investment decisions.

In this article, we'll explore these often neglected aspects of asset ownership. Our goal is to provide a comprehensive understanding of what it truly means to own different assets, equipping you to make informed decisions about investing your money, time, energy, and attention.

Many investors forget to consider ongoing financial costs like storage, maintenance, and insurance. They also overlook the time required to maintain assets, the attention diverted from other pursuits, and the emotional resilience some assets demand.

To illustrate, let's compare two asset classes that have long been popular with long-term investors: equities (ownership in great global companies) and residential property.

By examining the full spectrum of ownership costs for each, we can better guide our investment choices to secure a comfortable retirement.

THE COST OF EQUITY OWNERSHIP

Owning a diversified equity portfolio demands an informed upfront decision. However, in terms of ongoing costs, it demands very little. Counter-intuitively, the less you do, the more likely your chances of long-term success are.

At most, we'd recommend an annual valuation review and confirmation that the portfolio still suits your needs.

Day-to-day, the global companies you own a share of are managed by professional management and boards, and the fund you are invested in is reviewed by an experienced team of advisers, managers, and custodians. There is a monetary cost for this advice and management, but the right team can help you to minimise these and provide tremendous value on your road to financial independence.

The one intangible cost of this asset class is the emotional fortitude required to endure the frequent but temporary declines in the value of your portfolio.

However, the pain of these declines is likely to be forgotten in time while your long-term gains remain permanent.

THE COST OF PROPERTY OWNERSHIP

The allure of tangible assets like residential properties often captures investors' imaginations. The ability to see and touch an asset, coupled with the promise of ownership, leads many to equate tangibility with value. However, the picture looks very different when we analyse the true cost of owning physical property.

In this case, we've seen the extensive upfront monetary costs and a seemingly never-ending list of ongoing financial costs associated with ownership. These ongoing costs are often forgotten in the initial analysis of a property's attractiveness and are frequently left out when calculating the return on the investment.

The ongoing costs include annual maintenance, finance costs, insurance, various taxes, vacancy periods, tenant damage, outsourced management, and many others.

More worrying, especially for retired investors, is the ongoing "hassle factor" that can take many, often unexpected, forms.

Property ownership is a high-hassle game. These intangible costs frequently surpass monetary considerations, impacting investors' well-being and decision-making processes.

If it ever becomes time to sell, another round of valuation and selling costs await you.

All these factors add layers of complexity that affect not only your financial standing but also your personal stress levels.

Another aspect to consider is that selling property is a one-and-done deal. You can't sell half a property, so the sale tax cannot be strategically planned.

MOVING FORWARD

Many if not most of our clients hold some property in addition to their main residence in their portfolio and we support this in the interests of diversification but without a doubt some clients' property holdings make more sense than others.

While property may be a suitable investment for some investors, understanding the full spectrum of costs associated with different asset types empowers investors to make decisions beyond surface-level attraction.

Financial planning involves allocating financial resources and optimising time, attention, and energy. By considering all aspects of asset ownership, investors can make informed choices that enhance their overall quality of life while securing long-term financial stability.

As you review your investment strategy, consider your financial goals and the time, energy, and attention each asset demands.

DID YOU SPOT THEM?

Amateur astronomer Brian Watkiss peers into the Village night sky.

What a sight!: The aurora borealis, as seen from Alvechurch in October.
Image/Keith Johnston

NOVEMBER, the month of bonfires, planets and pantos. With clocks having gone back an hour (why do they do that?), the Sun sets just after 4pm and it's completely dark by 6.30pm so skywatching can start nice and early.

The first thing we can see if we look towards the glow of sunset is that brightest of planets, Venus. It is very low to the horizon at the start of the month but as the days go by, it begins to move away from the Sun and by the end of month, will be very bright indeed and easily mistaken for an oncoming aeroplane.

For the first few days, however, you need to be pretty quick as it disappears by 6pm. From this point on, as the skies darken, we begin to see the brighter stars, Vega high overhead, with its Summer triangle companions, Deneb to the left and Altair below. Over to the right of the sunset, we have Arcturus and low in the north, is Capella.

Over in the south east, is the next planet in our parade, Saturn, sitting below the great square of stars that is Pegasus.

Saturn is a most insubstantial world being a "Gas Giant" it is mostly composed of . . . well, gas. If you could sit Saturn in a giant bathtub, it would actually float. And anyway, the water would be very cold as it is so far away from the Sun.

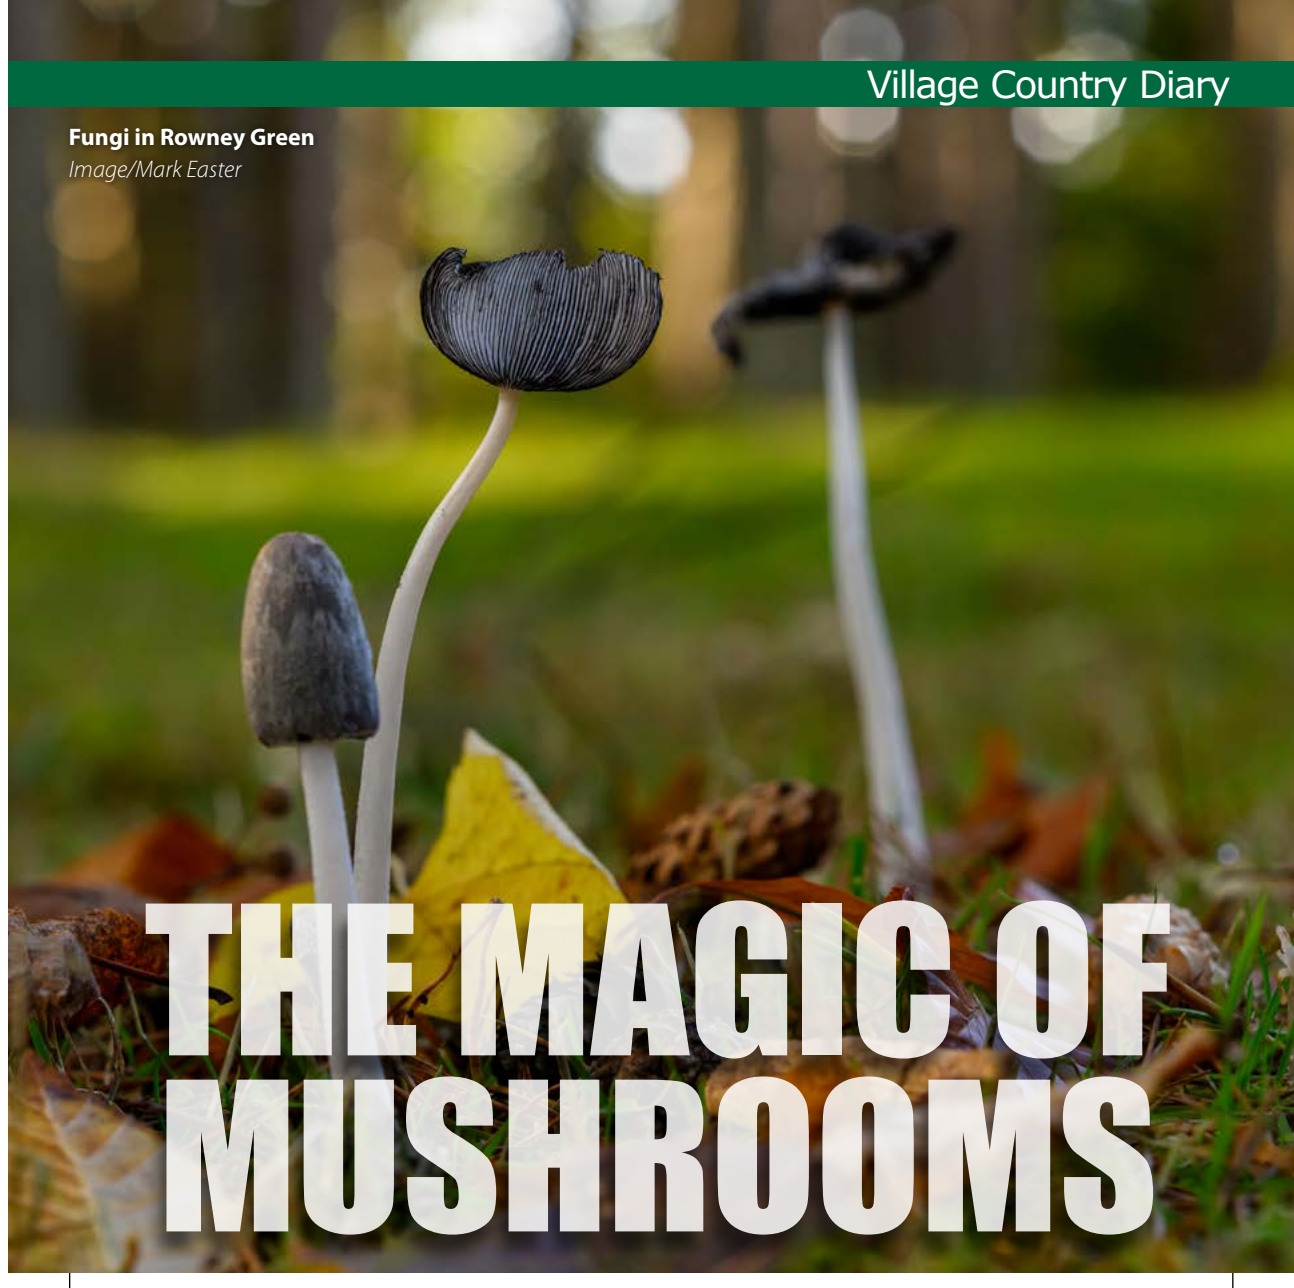
As the evening progresses, Arcturus vanishes below the horizon but over in the east, another gas giant appears. The largest of all the planets, Jupiter, has enough mass to be more powerful than Saturn and its gravitational field is so strong that it flexes the surface of its nearest moons making Io, in particular very volcanic, giving its disk the appearance of a pizza, everyone's favourite treat.

The largest object in our solar system is, obviously, the Sun and it has been very busy recently. On Wednesday 9th October it released a great cloud of charged particles which hit the Earth the following day giving a spectacular display of Northern Lights.

This aurora was so big it could be seen in our villages, but it really showed up well using a camera, even the ones in a mobile phone. An early warning was given by Aurora Watch and many people managed to grab a picture.

Now the Sun goes through an 11 year cycle of sunspots and we are just nearing the end of the peak period, so its not quite over yet. It rotates roughly, in just under a month, or at least the middle of it does. Higher latitudes take longer so it we may yet see more solar storms this month.

At the end of the month, what we will definitely see is the traditional Christmas vignette that is the Amateur Dramatic Society's Panto. It runs from the 28th to the 30th so see you there (oh yes you will!).



Fungi in Rowney Green
Image/Mark Easter

THE MAGIC OF MUSHROOMS

I haven't been able to get out and about so much as usual due to illness, but watching the signs of autumn come has been as interesting as always.

After the strange year's weather when insects were very scarce, I hear there was a little late spurt of butterflies, dragonflies and other insects in the warmer September weather.

Late-flowering ivy is full of nectar and pollen for them, and many other plants continued to flower late in relatively mild weather.

I recently saw a red admiral butterfly outside my window, so they're about! Now the frost has started the leaves are just beginning to turn in mid-October.

Not plant nor animal, this autumn Mary Green takes us through the deep-rooted and ancient kingdom of fungi.

Autumn is the time we most associate with fungi, though they are around us all the time. They are a separate kingdom from plants and animals in the way our life is described by scientists.

This was not always so: until the middle of last century they were considered a sub-set of plants, and many people still think of them this way ("Plant-based" foods often use fungi but technically shouldn't).

Now we know fungi are different from both animals and plants, there has been much more research on fungi and new things are being discovered about them all the time.

In simple terms, fungi usually consist of a network of threads, often underground, which link up with other organisms, especially plants.

They absorb and release nutrients from the soil around them and exchange these with the plants they live with. Most plants have "mycorrhizal" fungi, in other words fungi which grow in harmony with their roots.

Fungi can also grow on and in other parts of plants, and on and in animals. Usually the relationship between fungus and plant or animal is mutually beneficial, but sometimes it is not and the fungus may be destructive. Indeed, some fungi specifically live on dead and dying tissue and help the recycling process of nature.

We are generally unaware of these networks of underground fungi. They can be huge and live for a very long time – in fact they are now recognised as the largest and oldest natural things in our world.

Fungi grow by putting out thread-like structures called hyphae that make up the bodies of the organisms ("mycelia") and they digest organic matter externally before absorbing it into their mycelia. They then release carbon, oxygen, nitrogen and phosphorus into the soils and atmosphere, which support other forms of life. The networks move forwards as they grow and die off at the back, so a fungal mass may seem never to die.

Plants need these fungi and depend on them for some of their food. Some plants can link in to many different fungi but some need very specific ones. Examples of the latter are orchids – very hard to transplant as they need their own fungi – and heather, which relies on specific fungi on heathland.

An old bracket fungus: Some fungi grow on the side of trees.

Fungi are a very broad group and include yeasts and moulds - things that help produce our foods or destroy them!

What we generally think of as fungi are the fruiting bodies that some mycelia throw up from time to time to use another kind of reproduction with spores. These are our familiar mushrooms and toadstools.

There are lots of different families of fungi and hundreds of species with fruiting bodies. Only relatively few have common English names but they must have been better known in previous centuries when they were more widely eaten.

Where there are common names they are often helpfully descriptive, like Alfred's Cakes (burnt looking) amethyst deceiver (a lovely bluish-purple) and stinkhorn (rude-looking!)

It may be useful to divide them according to where and with what they appear. One group come up in grassy pastures, including garden lawns. Another, perhaps the largest, grows round the roots of trees, often particular species of tree. Some grow on trees. Others grow on dead and dying wood.

The pasture growing ones include the field mushroom, the one we know and love as a food.

There is a bigger relative called the horse mushroom, also very edible. They often pop up after a warm wet night. These mushrooms have white caps and pinkish gills, turning darker as they age.

You may have spotted clumps around the area: Fungi grows in a wooded area among leaf litter.

Unfortunately, there are other mushrooms in the same family that are very poisonous. One common poisonous one is the yellow-stainer mushroom, which as its name suggests turns yellow when cut. So even collecting field mushrooms is difficult. I can generally recognise them because I grew up with them. They are not so common these days because they grow in old pasture, not on "improved" grassland. Sometimes garden lawns have flowers of old pasture, and they may have the fungi too.

Another pasture group are the waxcaps. These are smaller than field mushrooms and often brightly coloured and as their name suggests look waxy. They shine in the sun and look very attractive. Some of them are edible but they aren't much eaten in this country.

Posionous Fly agaric.

We've really lost our culture of knowing and eating edible fungi, which is still much stronger on the continent. I remember going foraging with my French uncle and collecting and eating all sorts of mushrooms I wouldn't dare eat here.

Also on grassland are "fairy ring" mushrooms. They grow in coils and rings and often appear in people's lawns, reminding us of the fungi underneath all our gardens and houses.

There's another mushroom that's quite easy to identify because it comes at a completely different time of year. This is the St George's mushroom, which pops up in spring.

Puffballs are quite easy to identify too – they seem to have no stem, the ball shape growing directly on the ground. They can be very big and I've often found them round here. Many kinds are edible.

Most of our named fungi appear round trees, hedges and woodland. One that people recognise is the fly agaric, the red-and-white spotted one beloved of illustrators. It's poisonous though not usually fatal. It has psychoactive properties and can induce hallucinations and trance. It was used by some northern peoples for this as part of religious ceremonies. As with many fungi it can be eaten by some animals. It's believed to be one of the sources of belief in witches' ability to fly and even for flying reindeer! The term fly agaric comes from the fact that it was used as an insecticide in past times.

It grows especially among pine, fir and birch trees, so is more common in northern and western UK and across northern Europe and America. It's not common round here but I can usually find it in places like the Lickeys and the little wooded ridge going out from Barnt Green towards Blackwell.

Last year I saw a similar but even more poisonous spotted fungus called the panther cap. Often the names are a clue!

A good edible group of mushrooms are the boletes. There are more than fifty different kinds in Britain, and most, though not all, are edible. They're easy to tell apart from other mushrooms but not so easy to distinguish between the different boletes. Instead of gills like field mushrooms, boletes have a spongy underside.

The best one to find is the cep or penny-bun. As its English name suggests it is a lovely brown colour on top. It is edible and delicious. It's one of the mushrooms used extensively in prepared foods like mushroom soup, and is widely sold on the continent though not here.

The birch bolete is also common, growing as its name suggests by birch trees, and there is another big one called slippery jack, which has a shiny, slightly slimy brown top. Boletes all grow round tree roots, some deciduous and some round conifers, like the larch bolete.

Some of the other groups are even bigger than this. One group called russulas has more than 100 UK species. They have gills a bit like field mushrooms and are often bright colours, reddish or yellow. They grow round tree roots too. Unfortunately they range from edible to highly poisonous and you would need to know them very well before thinking of them as food.

There are three easily-identifiable fungi you might spot locally. First, the shaggy cap, also known as the lawyer's wig. It grows by roads and paths and in gardens and comes up like a column, splaying out to the familiar shaggy shape. It's edible when young but rather slimy when it gets to the shaggy stage!

Second is the hedgehog mushroom. This has spines underneath instead of gills. I've seen it by the canal in Shortwood.

Third is the cauliflower fungus, which looks like a cauli, and I've seen by Newbourne wood. All are edible, but don't try them without help.

Fungi on trees are fascinating. Some grow widely, some on specific trees. The jelly-ear grows on elder and is very easy to spot. The birch polypore is big, white and solid. Some of these "bracket fungi" are edible, especially the bright yellow chicken-of-the-woods, which I have tried and enjoyed (with guidance!). There are hoof fungi, looking just like horses' hooves, and the dryad's saddle, a big fleshy bracket.

And on dead wood and tree stumps you'll find even more. Turkey-tail or many-zoned polypore is well-known, with coloured bands. Oyster-mushrooms are quite common too, and a lot of smaller fungi. There are some fungi that destroy trees, like honey fungus.

This has just been a quick look through our fascinating fungi. See what you can spot this autumn – but best to leave them alone!

Turkey tail fungi: Also known as a many zoned polypore.

Chicken of the woods: Supposedly named due to the texture of the flesh resembling cooked chicken.

Editor's Note: While Mary knows her stuff on foraging and fungi, The Village does not advise readers to pick and eat fungi without the proper advice and training from a professional. As Mary points out; there are plenty of poisonous types that could be mistaken for an edible mushroom!

■ I thought I'd look back at some of my older poems. This one (below) I wrote in autumn nearly 40 years ago, driving to work in Birmingham.

Getting to work

Waiting at the lights, the traffic snarled
my eyes glazed I glare at the rear screen of the car in front: on the radio
"this is the age of miracles and wonder"
in the screen a strange pattern
I look up
seven geese fly in quiet formation over the city
- and the day breaks loose –
I drive on singing, my tyres kick up the falling leaves

The anonymous birder How to enjoy village birdlife

INVASION OF THE PARAKEETS

ROSE ringed parakeets, also known as ring necked parakeets, have been spotted on The Village patch.

Should we be alarmed? Are they the new grey squirrel, displacing our native species or a colourful addition to our local wildlife?

Well they are certainly not new, there are records of its presence in the UK in the 1800s and parrots have been kept as pets for centuries. However, it wasn't recorded as a breeding bird until the 1970s and was included in the official British bird list in 1983.

Like the bird itself there are some colourful myths about how the bird made the jump from the pet to wild breeding bird. . . One theory suggests they escaped from the set of the African Queen filmed in West London in 1951.

Another that Jimi Hendrix released a pair named Adam and Eve on Carnaby Street in 1968, possibly as a publicity stunt to promote his album Electric Ladyland, hopefully not distracting the crosstown traffic.

Outbreaks of "Parrot Fever", Psittacosis, a respiratory disease that can jump from birds to humans, were recorded in the 1930s and again in the 1950s resulting in the death of a Birmingham owner.

Imports of parrots were subsequently banned by the Ministry of Health for over two decades. Maybe worried owners released their pets as a result?

The most likely explanation for the initial jump from captivity is simply birds escaping due to multiple reasons from aviary damage to careless ownership. However they found freedom, there are approximately 12,000 breeding pairs in the UK and while their stronghold is in the South East, they have been recorded in all the home counties and are undoubtedly on the move into our region in greater numbers. This is probably due to the search for less competitive feeding and breeding locations as their numbers rise.

Regarding climate they may prefer warmer conditions hence the concentration in the South, however as they are native to Asia and sub-Saharan Africa they can happily tolerate cold even freezing temperatures, living in Himalayan regions too. Our mild weather is no problem for this most adaptable parrot.

They breed early in the year, laying two to four eggs, incubating for three weeks before fledging at seven weeks.

The nesting site is in an existing tree cavity. So this may have an impact on other cavity nesters such as woodpeckers, owls and nuthatches.

As with most successful species, they aren't fussy about their food, eating a variety of seeds, fruit, flowers, buds and even bark. They are more than happy to visit bird tables where their assertive nature ensures a good share of the spoils.

Like Corvids, parakeets will roost in very large numbers, no doubt sharing feeding information and grouping for warmth and security.

I have seen many more parakeets in our area this year, usually announced with a piercing, possibly annoying screech, previously sightings being relatively rare. I am not aware of a communal roost yet but would be interested to hear if readers are (If you know of any, let us know by email at editor@villageonline.co.uk)

Spotted in Alvechurch: A parakeet rests on an ornamental pump.
Image/K & J Stirrup

The question with all non-native species is: are they an invasive species to be controlled or are they just part of the ever changing ecology to be accepted and enjoyed?

Will they displace our woodpeckers and nuthatches or will they provide lots of opportunity for sparrowhawks, peregrines, owls and other predators?

The official view seems to be that they aren't unduly affecting our ecology at the moment but if they start causing a problem to crops or other human activity they may well end up going the way of the Norwegian Blue.

I'm undecided, a bit of a "Marmite bird", but definitely appearing in a tree near you soon.

Village Gardening

CUTTING BACK AND RESTING

Leighanne Gee from Fern 'n' Furl updates The Village on the highs and lows of a village gardener through the recent very wet weather, and gives her best top tips for the autumn and how to prepare your garden for cooler weather.

IT'S been a busy few months since my last feature in The Village, the biggest update is that my husband, Andy, has now joined Fern N Furl as a gardener.

Andy (pictured with Leighanne, below) has always had a keen interest in nature, spending long periods of his childhood outdoors; in his parents' garden, wading in the nearby brook and helping out at the urban farm that his family ran. His love of wildlife led to him studying Countryside Management at Moreton Morrell College, before a 13 year career at Winterbourne House and Garden in Birmingham.

His passion for plants, specifically carnivorous plants has outgrown our greenhouse . . . more on that another time.

As a team of two, we've been able to increase our availability, allowing us to share our skills and experience with a wider audience – only the recent yellow weather warnings have held us back! It might be cooler, and the nights may be drawing in, the garden is not yet fully rested, there's still plenty for us all to do . . .

All lawns, no matter the shape or condition, look better when their edges are sharp. Straight line or curved, the solution is the same; run an edging tool (AKA a half-moon) along the edge to trim away any excess growth.

If there isn't a slab or brick edge to follow, consider using a wooden plank or string line as a guide to avoid veering off course. Hose pipes can be useful for redefining any curved lines that you may have, simply lay it out, check that you're happy with the way it looks and follow the line as you cut.

And while the leaves are falling, it's worth keeping an eye on the lawn. A light scattering won't do any harm but if you have areas that are covered throughout the winter, you risk being left with bare patches come spring. Ponds can be affected by leaf litter too – the nutrients that leach into the water during decomposition can encourage excessive algal growth. Use a net to remove as many leaves as possible, leave the debris near the pond edge for a day or two to allow any misplaced wildlife to return to the water.

After a colourful display, soon the branches of deciduous trees will be bare, and the focus will shift to the evergreen trees and shrubs, and the structure they provide in the winter garden. Whether you prefer the softer "au naturel" look or the crisp, freshly-cut finish, evergreens are an essential part of any garden.

Of course there are other forms of winter interest; the feathery seed heads of ornamental grasses create movement and airiness. The bold stems of dogwood (Cornus) will help brighten a dull spot, with cultivars in a variety of shades of green, yellow, orange and red – surely there's a dogwood for everyone?!

Even the herbaceous perennials can add a bit of drama; the spiky seedheads of Eryngium, Echinops and Acanthus fade to silvery grey and hold up well to the elements. Slender stems of Verbena bonariensis, frothy heads of Symphotrichum (formerly named Aster) or bold Hydrangea blooms can withstand the rain and wind, while still providing shape and form. So don't be so eager to cut everything back, you may even be able to make an indoor arrangement from your remaining seedheads.

Many herbaceous plants will wither away, coming back with vigour in spring. For now, they can be neatened up; cut back dead growth to the ground, leaving an inch of stem visible to identify the location of the plants. Congested clumps can be split to rejuvenate them, providing you with 'extra' plants for elsewhere. With maybe enough spares to plant swap with a friend? Don't attempt to divide herbaceous perennials once the ground freezes, if you missed the window, hold off until spring and try again.

Climbers: Need to be cut back into shape.

Mulching with compost or leaf mould can help prevent weed growth and also nourish the soil. It's a good idea to spread a couple of inches over bare soil – while the ground is still accessible, this will be trickier to do in spring without trampling the new growth.

Check that any wall climbers are clear of the windows and gutters, trimming back any wayward growth that's not needed to fill gaps on the plant support/trellis. With the recent heavy rain, you may have raised your pots up off the ground already. If not, put some pot feet or bricks underneath them to prevent waterlogging and root rot over the winter.

Remember to bring your tender plants in before we get frosty conditions. Pelargoniums, dahlias, citrus and cacti that have spent the summer outdoors need some shelter to make it through the winter. Where possible, keep them away from direct heat and draughts, and water sparingly. Wrap tree ferns, bananas and similar larger plants with horticultural fleece if it's not feasible to bring them under glass/indoors.

When all of that is done, take a well earned rest and enjoy a hot cup of tea. Look out for the little gems as you go about your day; tiny pink Cyclamen, purple Callicarpa berries, grass seedheads, violas and autumn flowering Camellias.

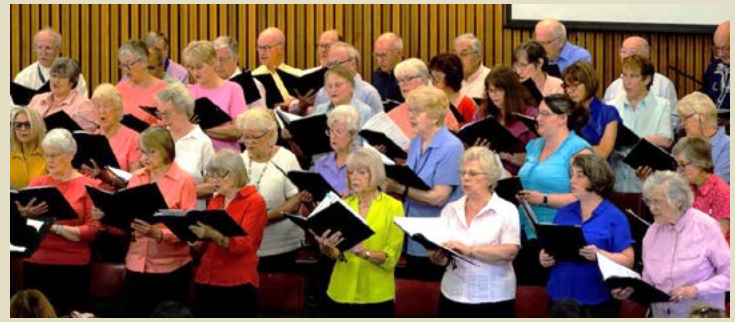
WHAT'S ON GUIDE



THE BENEFITS OF SINGING

ALMOST everyone can sing. Whether it's humming along to your favourite song, singing on your own in the shower, or part of an organised group, singing comes naturally to virtually everyone. But did you know that singing is really good for your health?

Over the last few years many academic research projects have been undertaken by universities and research establishments around the world. These reveal that choral singing can provide significant benefits including Improving physical health, improving mental health, improving social interaction and improving speaking ability.

Barnt Green Choral Society is dedicated to the promotion of choral singing for the benefit of the local community. They run an adult mixed-voice choir, comprising all backgrounds and abilities, led by professional musicians. They perform three concerts every year which includes a wide variety of popular modern songs, Christmas songs and carols, and choral classics. The emphasis is on singing to the best of your ability while having a great deal of fun.

New faces are always welcome and you don't need to have experience of choral singing or be able to read music. They meet on Monday evenings (7.45pm – 9.45pm) September to June at the Parish Centre, Barnt Green, B45 8NR. To find out more, visit the group at one of their Monday sessions or email info@barntgreenchoralsociety.org

FEATURE IN WHAT'S ON

If you would like to feature your group or event in The Village What's On section, the deadline for the November issue is 15 November 2024. info@villageonline.co.uk

20 From The Village archive Years Ago

OUR NOVEMBER 2004 cover showed the Alvechurch Morris men mid-dance during Alvechurch Alight. Inside were many more pictures from the weekend, including the lantern procession (below), activities at the cricket club, and the Battle of the Bands.

IN THE NEWS: Plus ça change . . . There was concern in Alvechurch about large lorries delivering to the Co-op several times a day (as shown in this photo sent in by a reader), blocking parking spaces as well as causing a danger to other road-users and pedestrians.

However, it wasn't all bad – one reader had written in to sing the praises of Alvechurch's public loo!

ALVECHURCH LIONS, which had only begun a year earlier as an under-9s team, had grown to such an extent that the club now boasted eight teams and almost 100 players aged from under-7s to under-14s, all from the Village area.

10 From The Village archive Years Ago

OUR NOVEMBER 2014 cover featured an atmospheric image of Cofton Park, taken and sent in by one of our readers, LaDonna Sears-Thomas. It was one of the first pictures taken on a mobile phone to be used on the cover of the magazine.

ALVECHURCH Parish Council was in a spin over plans to build an upmarket retirement complex on Green Belt land close to the centre of the village.

After first giving the McCarthy & Stone plan support "in principle", the council had decided to revisit the issue, noting that it had recently objected to 22 homes on Green Belt land at Hopwood. Coun Adrian Smith pointed out: "You can't support the Green Belt against one application and not for another."

ROCK MUSIC mogul Tim Parsons, of Hopwood, gave us a fascinating insight into the world of big stars and big egos as he prepared for an exhibition of memorabilia from his 25 years in the business, including playing a large part in the organisation of the Live Aid concerts in 1985.

A TEAM from Kings Norton Golf Club, Alvechurch, featuring players from across The Village area, celebrated winning the prestigious West Midlands League trophy after 47 years of trying.
